

Privacy Policy

In conformity with the GDPR legislation, we wish to inform you how we try to protect your private life. On this page, we inform you of the type of information which we collect when you call us, write or email us, or when you use our website. We explain why we gather these personal details and in which way we use them to perform our services to your benefit.

This confidentiality declaration is valid for the services provided by Tax & Legal Consultants BVBA. We are in no way responsible for the confidentiality declaration on other sites or sources. When you consult us or visit our website, this implies that you accept our confidentiality policy. Tax & Legal Consultants BVBA respects the private life of every user of our services or our website and treats all personal details provided with complete confidentiality.

Using our Services

Once you subscribe to one of our services (by telephone, mail, email or through our website), we will generally request personal details and sometimes confidential information. This information is used to judge whether we are able to advise or help you and if we are able to deliver the services. This is a legal obligation and also an obligation of our Institute. The information that you provide us with is stored on the secured servers of Tax & Legal Consultants BVBA or those of a third party.

Communication

When you send an email or any message through other media, it is highly likely that we will keep these messages electronically or in a material file. Sometimes we ask for personal details and confidential information that is necessary to treat your file in a particular situation. These will enable us to reply duly to your questions and deal with your requests. These details are stored on the secured servers of Tax & Legal Consultants BVBA or those of a third party, or in secured material files.

Goals

We do not gather or use any information you provide us for other reasons or goals than the ones described in this confidentiality policy, unless you would expressly request us to do so.

Third Parties

Due to the nature of our services, the data you provided us with are sometimes shared with the competent authorities when this is necessary to treat your file, and always after your written or oral consent has been given. In some cases, the information will be shared with other (sub)contractors, who are equally obliged to respect the confidentiality of the information provided.

Choice of personal details

Every prospective client or client is able to read, modify or erase the personal data he provided us, on first request.